Press Release

Universal Pictures and Apatow Productions joined Turtle Bay Resort in celebrating the 8th Military Police Brigade 66th Military Police Regimental Ball

Kahuku, HI, May 4, 2007:... Universal Pictures/Apatow Productions joined Turtle Bay Resort in welcoming the 8th Military Police Brigade 66th Military Police Regiment to their Regimental Ball at Turtle Bay Resort tonight.

Turtle Bay Resort had already scheduled the Regimental Ball when Universal Pictures/Apatow Productions came knocking at the door, asking to film Forgetting Sarah Marshall at the resort. Rather than looking elsewhere, Universal asked if they could participate and work around the ball. And participate they did.

Set designers went to work to produce an arch-way through which the soldiers and their spouses could enter. Yellow ribbons were passed out to both staffs, which greeted the soldiers as they arrived. To top it off, Universal sprung for red roses that each soldier could present their spouse at a special reception held in their honor.

"Rather than say no, our collective staffs worked together to find a way to say yes", said Bob Boyle, Turtle Bay Resort's General Manager. "The end result was a phenomenal win-win for both sides. Universal was able to demonstrate their support for our troops and we were able, with their set designers, to create memories that hopefully will serve them well as some deploy to Iraq in the next few weeks."

Turtle Bay Resort works with many military programs designed to help deploying and returning troops. "It is a way for us to give back to our community", said Tom Cross, Turtle Bay Resort's Director of Operations.

One guest who observed the scene stopped to give his thanks. "I served in the military and I was never treated like this", he said. "This is exactly how we all should have been treated. Thank you".
